Literacy Coordinator Interview Questions:

A Scoping Study Into Perceptions of Phonological Pedagogy in Rural Ghana Christopher John

Counihan, 2010-01-27 Ghana's education system is in a state of transition. Since the introduction of the Free and Compulsory Universal Basic Education (FCUBE) initiative in 1995, the country has struggled to meet with the demands of providing accessible schooling for children at any level. Moreover, with the underdevelopment of early years and primary provision, more children face slipping through the net. The battle to get children into schools and keep them there is proving to be problematic across the country. As a result, children are losing out on vital core learning experiences, particularly literacy. English is the medium of instruction in Ghana and is taught in schools from the primary level. However, with a blend of English and mother tongue instruction, children are finding it significantly harder to grasp the basic skills. As a result, support from NGOs and teaching professionals have sought to find practical solutions through vis-à-vis and reciprocal partnerships.

Mayan Literacy Reinvention in Guatemala Mary J. Holbrock, 2016-11-01 At the turn of the millennium, Guatemala experienced a Mayan cultural renaissance, often referred to as the Maya Movement. One aspect of this movement was the revitalization of indigenous Mayan languages for written purposes. The Mayan writing system is one of the oldest in the world; thus, its reinvention includes a new standardized alphabetic system for each of the twenty-two Mayan languages spoken in Guatemala, as well as the incorporation and continuation of some of its ancient elements. This book represents a case study conducted in two Mayan villages in the Guatemalan highlands and investigates three main aspects of Mayan literacy: its availability in publications and media, its practice in the school system, and its use among Maya people. Through this investigation, the promises and pitfalls of a literacy revitalization endeavor are detailed, and our understanding of the concept of literacy is reexamined.

Participatory Practices in Adult Education Pat Campbell, Barbara Burnaby, 2005-05-18

Although there has been a great deal of rhetoric about learner empowerment in educational and community development circles, this book is the first to offer detailed examples of successful participatory practices in adult education, spanning a wide range of program settings such as schools, institutions, communities, and the workplace. The editors join with practitioner colleagues in the United States and Canada to document successes, to network about ideas from active projects past and present that have had a participatory component, to share experience, new knowledge, lessons learned, and reflections. The focus is on projects initiated with the intention that greater participation would benefit individuals and groups previously excluded from positions of control. The aim is to provide concrete models and suggestions to practitioners who want to develop the participatory nature of their own activities, from initiation to organization, goal setting, and ongoing leadership of adult education programs. Some chapters give detailed descriptions of the triumphs and challenges in individual projects, while others center more on theoretical analysis and reflection on years of experience. All, however, are rooted in particular experiences and give concrete examples from action. Participatory Practices in Adult Education is a vital resource for both
