Lee, 2023-07-03 Inquiry guided learning IGL refers to an array of classroom practices that promote student learning through guided and increasingly independent investigation of complex questions and problems Rather than teaching the results of others investigations which students learn passively instructors assist students in mastering and learning through the process of active investigation itself IGL develops critical thinking independent inquiry students responsibility for their own learning and intellectual growth and maturity The 1999 Boyer Commission Report emphasized the importance of establishing a firm grounding in inquiry based learning and communication of information and ideas While this approach capitalizes on one of the key strengths of research universities the expertise of its faculty in research it is one that can be fruitfully adopted throughout higher education North Carolina State University is at the forefront of the development and implementation of IGL both at the course level and as part of a successful faculty led process of reform of undergraduate education in a complex research institution This book documents and explores NCSU s IGL initiative from a variety of perspectives how faculty arrived at their current understanding of inquiry guided learning and how they have interpreted it at various levels the individual course the major the college the university wide program and the undergraduate curriculum as a whole The contributors show how IGL has been dovetailed with other complementary efforts and programs and how they have assessed its impact The book is divided into four parts the first briefly summarizing the history of the initiative Part Two the largest section describes how various instructors departments and colleges in a range of disciplines have interpreted inquiry guided learning It provides examples from disciplines as varied as ecology engineering foreign language learning history music microbiology physics and psychology It also outlines the potential for even broader dissemination of inquiry guided learning in the undergraduate curriculum as a whole Part Three describes two inquiry guided learning programs for first year students and the interesting ways in which NCSU s university wide writing and speaking program and growing service learning program support inquiry guided learning Part Four documents how the institution has supported instructors and how they have supported themselves as well as the methods used to assess the impact of inquiry guided learning on students faculty and the institution as a whole The book has been written with three audiences in mind instructors who want to use inquiry guided learning in their classrooms faculty developers considering supporting comparable efforts on their campuses and administrators interested in managing similar undergraduate reform efforts It will also appeal to instructors of courses in the administration of higher education who are looking for relevant case studies of reform While this is a model successfully implemented at a research university it is one that is relevant for all institutions of higher education Active Learning in College Science Joel J. Mintzes, Emily M. Walter, 2020-02-23 This book explores evidence based practice in college science teaching It is grounded in disciplinary education research by practicing scientists who have chosen to take Wieman's 2014 challenge seriously and to investigate claims about the efficacy of alternative strategies in college science teaching. In editing this book we have chosen to showcase outstanding cases of exemplary practice supported by solid evidence and to include practitioners who offer models of teaching and learning that meet the high standards of the scientific disciplines. Our intention is to let these distinguished scientists speak for themselves and to offer authentic guidance to those who seek models of excellence. Our primary audience consists of the thousands of dedicated faculty and graduate students who teach undergraduate science at community and technical colleges, 4-year liberal arts institutions, comprehensive regional campuses, and flagship research universities. In keeping with Wieman's challenge, our primary focus has been on identifying classroom practices that encourage and support meaningful learning and conceptual understanding in the natural sciences. The content is structured as follows: after an Introduction based on Constructivist Learning Theory, Section I the practices we explore are Eliciting Ideas and Encouraging Reflection; Section II Using Clickers to Engage Students; Section III Supporting Peer Interaction through Small Group Activities; Section IV Restructuring Curriculum and Instruction; Section V Rethinking the Physical Environment; Section VI Enhancing Understanding with Technology; Section VII and Assessing Understanding; Section VIII. The book's final section IX is devoted to Professional Issues facing college and university faculty who choose to adopt active learning in their courses. The common feature underlying all of the strategies described in this book is their emphasis on actively engaging students who seek to make sense of natural objects and events. Many of the strategies we highlight emerge from a constructivist view of learning that has gained widespread acceptance in recent years. In this view, learners make sense of the world by forging connections between new ideas and those that are part of their existing knowledge base. For most students, that knowledge base is riddled with a host of naïve notions, misconceptions, and alternative conceptions they have acquired throughout their lives. To a considerable extent, the job of the teacher is to coax out these ideas to help students understand how their ideas differ from the scientifically accepted view, to assist as students restructure and reconcile their newly acquired knowledge, and to provide opportunities for students to evaluate what they have learned and apply it in novel circumstances. Clearly, this prescription demands far more than most college and university scientists have been prepared for.
