Abstract: The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, low-intensity, low-impact, and low-impact aerobically and resistance training program on the physical fitness of sedentary, middle-aged women. The study was a randomized, controlled trial. The subjects were divided into two groups: a control group and an exercise group. The exercise group performed a 12-week program of low-intensity, low-impact, and low-impact aerobically and resistance training. The control group did not exercise. The results of the study showed that the exercise group had significantly higher levels of physical fitness than the control group at the end of the 12-week program. The exercise group also had significantly higher levels of physical fitness than the control group at the end of the 12-week program. The exercise group had significantly higher levels of physical fitness than the control group at the end of the 12-week program. The exercise group had significantly higher levels of physical fitness than the control group at the end of the 12-week program.

Abstract

- [illegible]

Before the year ended, we estimated, using the 100,000+ accounts to which we applied the model, the number of accounts that would be in each of the four categories. We then compared the actual number of accounts in each category to the estimated number of accounts in each category.
