“The Top 10 Interview Questions ...And How to Answer Them Correctly!”

Dear Job Seeker,

In this special report, I'm sharing with you the top 10 questions you should be prepared to answer in your next interview. You'll gain valuable insights into how to answer these questions correctly and you'll also avoid common mistakes that prevent people from getting the job offers they deserve.

NOTE: The sample answers I provide are for educational purposes only. I do NOT recommend that you recite these answers word-for-word in your interview. You'll always have more success if you provide compelling personalized answers to interview questions.

Question #1: “Tell me about yourself”

This is not an opportunity to tell your life story or to recount your entire resume. In just a couple of sentences, describe your top strengths and motivations and the experiences that underscore these characteristics. Then connect these characteristics to your specific objectives and to what you can do for the hiring organization. Your answer should be around 60 seconds.

Here's the response of a recent college grad who landed a job at ESPN:

“I love sports, in the game, in the stands, watching sports center in the morning, or debating the Knick's roster with my friends at a bar at night. And as the captain for my soccer team, I enjoyed how my words could impact the outcome of a game or a season. I have also learned how to influence others with my writing - having had 2 professors use my work as their class examples. So, I want to apply my communication skills and my love for influencing others to energize fans of professional sports. More specifically, I hope to write provocative articles that cause fans to think about sports instead of anything else. From what I know so far, your firm looks like a great opportunity to pursue this path, and I hope to learn more today.”
