Munson,2014-07-24 The First World War has survived as part of our national memory in a way no previous war has ever done This collection of letters which lay untouched for almost ninety years allows a unique glimpse into the war as experienced by one family at the time transporting us back to an era which is now slipping tantalizingly out of living memory The Slaters the family at the heart of these letters lived in Oxford Like most families they were both typical and unique Gilbert the father of the family had been head of Ruskin College in Oxford and during the war found work as the first Professor of Indian Economics in Madras His wife Violet grew to detest the war and became an increasingly vocal pacifist as the slaughter continued Owen their eldest son a schoolboy in 1914 was fighting in France by war s end In the letters they wrote to each other and their friends at this time we see how the war increasingly impacted upon each of their lives and the life of the world around them rationing Violet s increasing involvement in radical politics the deaths of friends the fear of Zeppelin raids when in London the endless discussions between Violet and Gilbert about how to keep their son out of the trenches and the growth of Owen from schoolboy to soldier serving as a junior officer on the Western Front Above all in their privacy and immediacy their inconsistencies and false hopes these letters bring us as near as we can ever be to understanding what people thought feared and hoped for during these momentous years A Hope in the Unseen Ron Suskind,1999-05-04 The inspiring true coming of age story of a ferociously determined young man who armed only with his intellect and his willpower fights his way out of despair In 1993 Cedric Jennings was a bright and ferociously determined honor student at Ballou a high school in one of Washington D C s most dangerous neighborhoods where the dropout rate was well into double digits and just 80 students out of more than 1 350 boasted an average of B or better At Ballou Cedric had almost no friends He ate lunch in a classroom most days plowing through the extra work he asked for knowing that he was really competing with kids from other harder schools Cedric Jennings s driving ambition which was fully supported by his forceful mother was to attend a top college In September 1995 after years of near superhuman dedication he realized that ambition when he began as a freshman at Brown University But he didn t leave his struggles behind He found himself unprepared for college he struggled to master classwork and fit in with the white upper class students Having traveled too far to turn back Cedric was left to rely on his intelligence and his determination to maintain hope in the unseen a future of acceptance and reward In this updated edition A Hope in the Unseen chronicles Cedric s odyssey during his last two years of high school follows him through his difficult first year at Brown and tells the story of his subsequent successes in college and the world of work Eye opening sometimes humorous and often deeply moving A Hope in the Unseen weaves a crucial new thread into the rich and ongoing narrative of the American experience

Cynicism and Hope Meg E.

Cox, 2009-01-01 On the morning after they walked for miles through freezing rain to a prayer vigil outside the White House in March 2007 a group of young war protesters listened to one last speech before heading home to Chicago Peter Dula who had served with the Mennonite Central Committee in Iraq spoke honestly about the caustic combination of guilt and disempowerment the protesters were struggling with He commended protesting and suggested resisting war taxes then made two surprising final recommendations ride a bike and plant a garden Electrified by Dula s speech the group wanted to talk more about their disillusionment and to learn from their elders in activism and the church So in November 2007 they hosted a conference at Reba Place Church in Evanston Illinois where over two hundred people gathered to learn worship and contemplate a more hopeful way This volume is a collection of the major addresses from that conference The contributors suggest a new way to live in the tension between hope that things will improve and cynicism about whether they ever will While creating space for lament they point toward a radical Christian faithfulness in neighborhoods and congregations that can be both hopeful and profoundly political
