Physical Activity, Self-Regulation, and Executive Control Across the Lifespan Sean P. Mullen,Peter Hall,2016-02-05 There is overwhelming evidence linking increased physical activity with positive changes in cognitive functioning and brain health Much of what we know about these interrelationships comes from aerobic exercise training studies with older adults and children This literature has paved the way for the neuroscientific investigation of mechanisms responsible for exercise induced cognitive and brain health enhancement a list that ranges from molecular changes to systemic changes in executive control and neural connectivity A new perspective has also emerged that aims to understand executive control processes that may underlie the regulation of health behavior In accordance with this view physical activity falls under the umbrella of health behaviors that require a substantial amount of executive control Executive control is a limited resource and the aging process depletes this resource People who regularly exercise are said to have higher self regulatory control planning goal shielding and impulse control than irregular exercisers The successful maintenance of physical activity participation in lieu of daily cognitive stressors likely reflects an adaptive resistance to control failures Indeed a handful of studies have shown the relationship between greater executive control and subsequently higher levels of physical activity. However, little is known about the neural correlates of physical activity adherence or sedentary behavior with the view that neurocognitive factors have an antecedent and reciprocal influence on these behaviors. No research has focused on the brain networks responsible for the self-regulation of physical activity, which likely overlaps with structures and functions playing critical roles in the regulation of other health behaviors. Interdisciplinary investigations are needed to explain the extent to which physical activity self-regulation and self-regulatory failure is dependent upon or under the influence of executive control processes and brain networks. Understanding the degree to which self-regulatory resources may be enhanced, restored, and trained will have enormous implications for basic science and applied fields. It is also of great import to understand whether or not physical activity self-regulation is a domain-specific behavior associated with specific brain networks or to determine the extent to which regulatory network sharing occurs. The aim of this Frontiers Research Topic is to curate contributions from researchers in social and cognitive neurosciences and related fields whose work involves the study of physical activity behavior, self-regulation, and executive control. For this Research Topic, we therefore solicit reviews, original research articles, and opinion papers which draw theoretical or empirical connections related to sustained physical activity behavior, self-regulatory strategies, cognitive performance, and brain structure and function. While focusing on work in the neurosciences, this Research Topic also welcomes contributions in the form of behavioral studies, psychophysiological investigations, and methodological innovations. This Frontiers Research Topic will carve out new directions for the fields of exercise, cognitive, and social neurosciences. We hope you will consider submitting your work.

Motor Skills and Their Foundational Role for Perceptual, Social, and Cognitive Development Klaus Libertus, Petra Hauf, 2017-05-18. Motor skills are a vital part of healthy development and are featured prominently both in physical examinations and in parents' baby diaries. It has been known for a long time that motor development is critical for children's understanding of the physical and social world. Learning occurs through dynamic interactions and exchanges with the physical and the social world, and consequently movements of eyes and head arms and legs and the entire body are a critical during learning At birth we start with relatively poorly developed motor skills but soon gain eye and head control learn to reach grasp sit and eventually to crawl and walk on our own The opportunities arising from each of these motor milestones are profound and open new and exciting possibilities for exploration and interactions and learning Consequently several theoretical accounts of child development suggest that growth in cognitive social and perceptual domains are influenced by infants own motor experiences Recently empirical studies have started to unravel the direct impact that motor skills may have on other domains of development This volume is part of this renewed interest and includes reviews of previous findings and recent empirical evidence for associations between the motor domain and other domains from leading researchers in the field of child development We hope that these articles will stimulate further research on this interesting question

Advancing Research on Teachers' Professional Vision: Implementing novel Technologies, Methods and Theories Christian

Kosel,Tina Seidel ,Christian Hartmann,Ann-Sophie Grub,2024-07-25 A classroom full of students can be overwhelming for teachers It is critical that teachers are able to filter and meaningfully interpret the relevant information in this complex scenario Much of this filtering and interpretation occurs through selective visual perception Over the last decade a rapidly growing number of studies in empirical educational research used eye tracking to investigate teachers selective visual perceptual processes in the classroom Theoretically visual attention and perception are often conceptualized as knowledge based noticing coupled with knowledge based reasoning about what is visually perceived Recent eye tracking studies have shown that experienced teachers in particular show improved selective attention of classroom events through faster detection of relevant information and improved monitoring of learning relevant situations Researchers agree that a critical driver of selective attention processes is the professional knowledge declarative procedural and metacognitive of experienced teachers which controls selective perceptual processes in a top down process The findings are significant and provide important insights for research on teacher professionalization Improving Reading Comprehension of Middle and High School Students Kristi L. Santi,Deborah K. Reed,2015-03-04 This volume focuses on our understanding of the reading comprehension of adolescents in a high stakes academic environment Leading researchers share their most current research on each issue covering theory and empirical research from a range of specializations including various content areas English language learners students with disabilities and reading assessment Topics discussed include cognitive models of reading comprehension and how they relate to typical or atypical development of reading comprehension reading in history classes comprehension of densely worded and symbolic mathematical texts understanding causality in science texts the more rigorous comprehension standards in English language arts classes balancing the practical and measurement constraints of the assessment of reading comprehension understanding the needs and challenges of English language learners and students in special education with respect to the various content areas discussed in this book This book is of interest to researchers in literacy and educational psychology as well as curriculum developers Training Readers and Writers for a Multimodal and Multimedia Society: Cognitive Aspects Ester Trigo-Ibanez,Inmaculada Clotilde Santos Diaz,Marcela Jarpa,2024-02-07 Contemporary societies have been advancing gradually towards the construction of a model of a literate population Significant efforts have been made so that most citizens can access various sources today using their reading and writing abilities but are we really prepared to face the information age Is information literacy being promoted from schools Are individual capabilities being considered Do we have a true critical literacy This article collection aims to show an overview of the most recent research ranging from the individual to the collective from the subject s competencies and their beliefs to the way to develop them from school There is room in this Research Topic for investigations belonging to the linguistic psychological and didactic field This Research Topic aims to address a pressing problem in contemporary world societies It is proposed to offer various contributions related to critical literacy in general and reading and writing In this sense research that addresses analog and digital reading writing processes academic literacy and the use of resources such as non fiction illustrated books to develop critical thinking will be welcome But also and in a very important way the cognitive processes of the subject will be considered not only to deal with access to information but also in the construction of their mental lexicon an issue that offers the vision of the world of those who are immersed in literacy and in the post truth era Feigin and
