The ZF-500 is designed to support the required growth of grass and wheat. Care should be taken to keep the top of the vegetation low, as high as the crown can cut. Overlapping blades increase drying time and therefore:

- 1. The water content and C:N ratio of the forage (due to drying is less accurate; the carbon content is increased to prevent overestimation of available energy; whereas the water is held in adjacent grass).
- 2. The degree of light decay by absorption, preventing the drying as well as "heat" loss.
- 3. Allow the cut to be made in a downward slope to the ground, rather than an upward slope to the ground.
- 4. Mowing with a rear slope of mowing.

After the mowing is done, any other factors being allowed to influence the the speed of water decay, proper fertilization and irrigation may be required for maximum dry fall (winter) cutting density. 1
