The research findings are the basis of the work at the school, because each day is an opportunity to use the knowledge already acquired. Thus, every different situation is an opportunity to use the knowledge already acquired. The knowledge learned in the course of the research program is designed to be used in the classroom and in the community.

Learning objectives from this program and these three modules, students are designed to learn: ways that police officers interact with the public; and students will be able to identify and explain the positive and negative effects of various programs. Students will also discuss the benefits and drawbacks of helping or interfering with police officers' efforts to maintain order, and will compare these efforts to the efforts of other law enforcement agencies.
