Invisible Wounds of War Terri L. Tanielian,Lisa Jaycox,2008 Since October 2001 approximately 1 64 million U S troops have been deployed for Operations Enduring Freedom and Iraqi Freedom OEF OIF in Afghanistan and Iraq Early evidence suggests that the psychological toll of these deployments many involving prolonged exposure to combat related stress over multiple rotations may be disproportionately high compared with the physical injuries of combat. In the face of mounting public concern over post deployment health care issues confronting OEF OIF veterans several task forces independent review groups and a Presidential Commission have been convened to examine the care of the war wounded and make recommendations. Concerns have been most recently centered on two combat related injuries in particular post traumatic stress disorder and traumatic brain injury. With the increasing incidence of suicide and suicide attempts among returning veterans concern about depression is also on the rise. The study discussed in this monograph focuses on post traumatic stress disorder major depression and traumatic brain injury not only because of current high level policy interest but also because unlike the physical wounds of war these conditions are often invisible to the eye remaining invisible to other servicemembers family members and society in general. All three conditions affect mood thoughts and behavior yet these wounds often go unrecognized and unacknowledged. The effect of traumatic brain injury is still poorly understood leaving a large gap in knowledge related to how extensive the problem is or how to address it. RAND conducted a comprehensive study of the post deployment health related needs associated with these three conditions among OEF OIF veterans the health care system in place to meet those needs gaps in the care system and the costs associated with these conditions and with providing quality health care to all those in need. This monograph presents the results of our study which should be of interest to mental health treatment providers health policymakers particularly those charged with caring for our nation's veterans and U S service men and women their families and the concerned public. All the research products from this study are available at <http://veterans.rand.org>. Data collection for this study began in April 2007 and concluded in January 2008. Specific activities included a critical review of the extant literature on the prevalence of post traumatic stress disorder major depression and traumatic brain injury and their short and long term consequences a population based survey of service members and veterans who served in Afghanistan or Iraq to assess health status and symptoms as well as utilization of and barriers to care a review of existing programs to treat service members and veterans with the three conditions focus groups with military service members and their spouses and the development of a microsimulation model to forecast the economic costs of these conditions overtime. Among our recommendations is that effective treatments documented in the scientific literature evidence based care are available for PTSD and major depression. Delivery of such care to all veterans with PTSD or major depression would pay for itself within two years or even save money by improving productivity and reducing medical and mortality costs. Such care may also be a cost effective way to retain a ready and healthy military force for the future. However to ensure that this care is delivered requires system level changes across the Department of Defense the Department of Veterans Affairs and the U S health care system.

Neurological and Neuropsychiatric Disorders Affecting Military Personnel and Veterans Mary Jo Pugh, William Walker, Venkatagiri Krishnamurthy, Lisa C. Krishnamurthy, Chen Lin, 2024-03-20 Active military personnel and Veterans of the military face unique neurologic and neuropsychiatric challenges unique to this population compared to the public The military and Veteran population have faced traumatic experiences that lead to both physical and mental consequences Amongst the important challenges unique to this population include traumatic brain injury increased risk of neurological disorders such as dementia and stroke and comorbid neuropsychiatric conditions Unfortunately many of these challenges also have a negative feedback loop such as brain injuries leading to post traumatic stress disorder which can increase risk of Alzheimer's Dementia Unfortunately there are many gaps in knowledge to understand the unique challenges this population faces There are many opportunities to improve our understanding of these challenges that military personnel and Veterans face The goal of this Research Topic is to shine a light and improve understanding of these challenges We aim to collect knowledge from the global network of researchers working on topics related to Neurological and Neuropsychiatric disorders affecting military personnel and Veterans There are currently many gaps in the diagnosis prevention and treatment of conditions that affect this population disproportionately This collection of work in the Frontiers in Neurology will give authors the opportunity to share with the global scientific community important research findings that address these gaps For this collection we are looking for submissions with topics that specifically address the unique challenges affecting military personnel and Veterans with Neurologic and Neuropsychiatric disorders

A National Trauma Care System

National Academies of Sciences, Engineering, and Medicine, Health and Medicine Division, Board on the Health of Select Populations, Board on Health Sciences Policy, Committee on Military Trauma Care's Learning Health System and Its Translation to the Civilian Sector, 2016-10-12 Advances in trauma care have accelerated over the past decade spurred by the significant burden of injury from the wars in Afghanistan and Iraq Between 2005 and 2013 the case fatality rate for United States service members injured in Afghanistan decreased by nearly 50 percent despite an increase in the severity of injury among U S troops during the same period of time But as the war in Afghanistan ends knowledge and advances in trauma care developed by the Department of Defense DoD over the past decade from experiences in Afghanistan and Iraq may be lost This would have implications for the quality of trauma care both within the DoD and in the civilian setting where adoption of military advances in trauma care has become increasingly common and necessary to improve the response to multiple civilian casualty events Intentional steps to codify and harvest the lessons learned within the military's trauma system are needed to ensure a ready military medical force for future combat and to prevent death from survivable injuries in both military and civilian systems This will require partnership across military and civilian sectors and a sustained commitment from trauma system leaders at all levels to assure that the necessary knowledge and tools are not lost A National Trauma Care System defines the components of a learning health system necessary to enable continued improvement in trauma care in both the civilian and the military sectors This report provides recommendations to ensure that lessons learned over the past decade from the military s experiences in Afghanistan and Iraq are sustained and built upon for future combat operations and translated into the U S civilian system
