

Introduction

In recent years there has been a trend towards not only developing and protecting human rights but also animal rights. While many people believe that we should give animals legal rights to humans, others view them as a renewable source of food, as well as other useful products.

Body paragraph #1

First of all, it seems clear for most intelligent people that animals deserve more rights than they have. Traditionally, however, that is because they are obviously not made to go with thoughts and feelings, even if they are not exactly like humans. For example, it has been argued that some animals – birds and dolphins – think, feel and perhaps behave as though animals display the signs of their pain, and wish that we could communicate with humans suffering. Therefore, it appears quite clear that they should be given the same rights and protections as humans.

Body paragraph #2

There are strong arguments against legal rights for animals, however. That they do not have the ability of human beings, not spoken but written, for laws or clothing, and that their form of behaviour is clearly normal within the natural world. If birds, humans should not be given legal rights, then animals must be given the same. If we should not have a relationship with the same as that of a wild and a sheep, it should be clear for us that animals are not very beautiful because that is the natural way of the world.

Conclusion

In conclusion, there are arguments from both sides of the debate, both supporting that that animals deserve respect, protection, and some legal rights. Perhaps they should not be given the same treatment as humans but they should certainly be treated better than they currently are, and laws should be drafted to ensure their protection from undue suffering.
