My belief about myself as a learner when I entered the class was a positive one. I attended a college prep school for high school and went to Oregon State University last year. I had plenty of practice with different learning techniques and found what works well for me. I believe I'm more of a visual learner than an auditory learner. It is easier to see a powerpoint and retain the knowledge then listen to a lecture and have the same retention. Entering the class I thought I liked working in groups more than working individually on projects, but that has since changed. I think it is more beneficial to me to work alone because I can get more done. When I entered the class I believed that reading the material closer to the due date was a better idea because I may not remember what I had read if I didn't.

What I have discovered about myself, as a learner over the term is vast. I learned that I can read the material way in advance and just briefly skim over the text and remember just about everything, were as I thought reading closer was more beneficial. I also learned that working in groups really isn't my specialty. I prefer working by myself because I'm able to get a lot more done and not have to worry about other people forgetting their part of the project. I don't like having to worry about other people not following through. I also learned that looking at the daily record in advanced helped me

Writing as Punishment in Schools, Courts, and Everyday Life Spencer Schaffner, 2019-06-11 A probing and prescient consideration of writing as an instrument of punishment Writing tends to be characterized as a positive aspect of literacy that helps us to express our thoughts to foster interpersonal communication and to archive ideas However there is a vast array of evidence that emphasizes the counterbelief that writing has the power to punish shame humiliate control dehumanize fetishize and transform those who are subjected to it In Writing as Punishment in Schools Courts and Everyday Life Spencer Schaffner looks at many instances of writing as punishment including forced tattooing drunk shaming court ordered letters of apology and social media shaming with the aim of bringing understanding and recognition to the coupling of literacy and subjection Writing as Punishment in Schools Courts and Everyday Life is a fascinating inquiry into how sinister writing can truly be and directly questions the educational ideal that powerful writing is invariably a public good While Schaffner does look at the darker side of writing he neither vilifies nor supports the practice of writing as punishment Rather he investigates the question with humanistic inquiry and focuses on what can be learned from understanding the many strange ways that writing as punishment is used to accomplish fundamental objectives in everyday life Through five succinct case studies we meet teachers judges parents sex traffickers and drunken partiers who have turned to writing because of its presumed power over writers and readers Schaffner provides careful analysis of familiar punishments such as schoolchildren copying lines and more bizarre public rituals that result in ink covered bodies and individuals forced to hold signs in public Schaffner argues that writing based punishment should not be dismissed as benign or condemned as a misguided perversion of writing but instead should be understood as an instrument capable of furthering both the aims of justice and degradation

Improving Writing and Thinking Through Assessment Teresa L.

Flateby,2010-06-01 Improving Writing and Thinking through Assessment is designed to help individual faculty and administrators select assessment approaches and measures to maximize their students writing and thinking The book offers useful guidance through presentation of recommended assessment guidelines and measurement principles in Part 1 and applications from a variety of contributors in Part 2 It addresses a wide range of audiences including instructors who want to assess and thus foster writing and thinking in their courses administrators and instructors planning to assess writing and thinking at the program or institutional level and graduate students interested in improving students writing and critical thinking This book is more guide than a cookbook By providing comprehensive standards and criteria that help individuals or teams develop plans and measures to improve writing and thinking the book should be helpful for academic and Student Affairs administrators and faculty as the principles apply equally to all engaged in assessment Contributors representing a wide range of educators illustrate many of the approaches and methods described in the theoretical section of the book using a variety of assessment strategies at both classroom and program levels Readers will see how different types of institutions both private and public as well as undergraduate and graduate have designed assessment strategies and plans to gauge and enhance writing and thinking growth in the classroom and across programs They candidly describe challenges encountered and solutions they adopted or suggest These chapters reflect approaches and perspectives from various discourse communities including writing program administrators composition faculty assessment professionals and individual faculty representing several disciplines The author argues the urgent need to develop strong writers and thinkers She discusses challenges and obstacles but underscores the necessity for more faculty involvement and institutional commitment This book will help institutions and individual faculty design and implement sound meaningful assessment strategies to foster effective writing and thinking that will both advance the goals of the institutional mission and meet faculty s disciplinary objectives and scholarly concerns
