He was an old man who fished alone in a small boat off the coast of Cuba. The boat was no larger than a garage, and the old man was lean and weathered like bark. He had gone eighty-four days without catching a fish. The last catch had been with him forty days before. But after forty days without a fish the boys, who had respected him because of the great fish he had caught and his amazing skills, were beginning to doubt the old man's luck and were calling him a failure who had been unlucky now definitely as Santiago, which is the form of unlucky, boy had gone to the desert.

at their orders in another boat which caught three good fish the first week. It made the boy sad to see the old man come in each day with his skiff empty and he always went down to help him carry either the coiled lines or

Everything about him was old except his eyes and they were the same color as the sea and were cheerful and undefeated.

"Santiago," the boy said to him as they climbed the bank from where the skiff was
