

Harris County Vegetable Gardening Guide

Prepared by Tom LeRoy, Montgomery County Extension Agent—Horticulture

Home gardening continues to grow in popularity. By conservative estimates, one of every three families does some type of home gardening, and a majority of gardens are located in urban areas. Texas gardeners can produce tasty, nutritious vegetables year-round. The only requirements for successful gardening are to follow a few basic rules and to make practical decisions.

Garden Site

Although many urban gardeners have little choice, selecting the best garden site is extremely important. An area exposed to full or near-full sunlight, with deep, well-drained, fertile soil is ideal. The location should be near a water outlet and free of competition from existing shrubs or trees. In areas where soil drainage is less than ideal, you may want to consider constructing a raised bed or box garden. Landscaping timbers, concrete blocks or treated lumber, as well as a variety of other materials, can be used to construct your raised beds. By modifying certain cultural practices and crop selections, almost any site can become a highly productive garden.

Crop Selections

As a home gardener, one of your first major decisions is deciding which vegetables to grow. Table 1 lists crops suitable for small and large gardens. Select vegetable varieties that return a good portion of nutritious food for the time and space required. Vine crops such as watermelons, cantaloupes, winter squash

Table 1. Home Garden Vegetables

Small Garden Vegetables		Large Garden Vegetables
Beets	Green beans	Cantaloupes	Potatoes

Eggplant	Radishes	Okra	Watermelons
English peas	Spinach
Garlic	Tomatoes

and cucumbers require more room than many other plants, but locating the garden near a fence or trellis may allow you to grow vine crops in a limited space. Plant according to family needs, and avoid over-planting any particular vegetable. When surpluses are produced, however, they can be preserved by freezing or canning.

Proper variety selection is an important key to successful gardening. The wrong variety may not produce satisfactory yields regardless of subsequent care and attention. A list of vegetable varieties suitable for the local area can be obtained from the office of Harris County Extension. New varieties can be fun to try, but limit experimental plantings to a small area until you've tested them to see how they perform in your garden.

If your garden area does not receive full or near-full sunlight, try leafy crops such as leaf lettuce, mustard, and parsley. Table 2 indicates vegetable crops that do well in full sunlight and those that tolerate partial shade.

Table 2. Light Requirements of Common Plants

Require Bright Sunlight
Beans	Eggplant	Potatoes
Broccoli	Okra	Pumpkins
Cantaloupes	Onions	Squash

Garden Plan

A gardener needs a plan, just as an architect does. Careful planning reduces the chance of mistakes and increases returns on your labor.

Long-term crops require a long growing period. Plant them where they won't interfere with care and harvesting of
