

Chapter 4: American Political Culture

American

- America believes in greater political equality
 - Everyone is Equal.
 - Even the Queen gets pulled over
 - Everyone should have an equal say in the political process, regardless of their socio-economic status, race, or background.
- The U.S. Constitution and its amendments aim to uphold and protect these rights, providing mechanisms like voting and representation
- America doesn't always help the poor people who wasted their lives.

British and French

- British/French believe in greater economic equality
 - More extensive social welfare programs
 - More progressive tax systems
- Policies aimed at reducing the wealth gap and ensuring everyone has access to basic necessities.
- It is the government's responsibility to take care of the poor
 - Even if it means redistributing wealth or providing substantial public services.

Brazil, Argentina and Mexico

- Believe in greater political equality (just like america)
 - Equal Representation
- DIFFERENT RESULTS
 - Corruption
 - Military takeovers
 - Demagoguery
 - Demagoguery refers to political leaders who gain popularity by appealing to the emotions, fears, and prejudices of the populace, often using populist rhetoric
- American abundance (resources)?
 - It might suggest pondering if the wealth of natural resources in the Americas played a role in shaping the political and economic outcomes of these countries.
 - Abundant resources can be both a blessing, driving economic growth, and a curse, leading to conflicts, corruption, and economic disparities (sometimes referred to as the "resource curse").
 - Countries with an abundance of natural resources, particularly non-renewable resources like minerals and fuels, tend to have less economic growth, less democracy, and poorer development outcomes than countries with fewer natural resources.
