(India People and Economy) (Chapter – 1) (Important Questions)

(Population)

(Class – XII)

1921 is called the 'demographic divide' in the demographic history of India. The high mortality during this period was the product of large scale abnormal deaths due to epidemics of influenza, plague, small pox, cholera, etc. Influenza alone claimed 12 million lives in 1918. Food shortages caused by severe droughts in 1911, 1913, 1915, 1918 and 1920 claimed their own toll. In addition, thousands of Indian soldiers lost their lives during the World War I (1914-18).

Question 4:

Which period is called as the period of 'population explosion'? Why?

Answer 4:

The decades 1951-1981 are referred to as the period of population explosion in India, which was caused by a rapid fall in the mortality rate but a high fertility rate of population in the country. The average annual growth rate was as high as 2.2 per cent. It is in this period, after the Independence, that developmental activities were introduced through a centralized planning process and economy started showing up ensuring the improvement of living condition of people at large. Consequently, there was a high natural increase and higher growth rate. This unprecedented growth rate was due to the accelerated developmental activities and further improvement in health facilities. The living conditions of the people improved enormously. Death rates declined much faster than the birth rates. This situation resulted in high natural increase. Thus, it was fertility induced growth.

Question 5:

Why significant rise in youth population is highly vulnerable though they are future policy makers of a nation?

Answer 5:

The growth and development of any country depends on its youth because they are the future policy makers of any country. Youth can be a positive force for development when provided with the knowledge and opportunities they need to thrive. In particular, young people should acquire the education and skills needed to contribute in a productive economy, and they need access to a job market that can absorb them into its Labour force. With the growing youth population there are also some challenges such as lower age at marriage, illiteracy – particularly female illiteracy, school dropouts, and low intake of nutrients, high rate of maternal mortality of adolescent mothers, high rate of HIV and AIDS infections, physical and mental disability or retardedness, drug abuse and alcoholism, juvenile crime. To overcome these problems, the Government of India has undertaken certain policies to impart proper education to the adolescent groups so that their talents are better channelized and properly utilized. One such example is introduction of 'The National Youth Policy' in 2014. It will cover the entire country catering the needs of all youth in the age-group of 15-29 years, which constitutes 27.5 per cent of the population according to Census-2011, that is about 33 crore persons. It will replace NYP-2003, to take care of developments since 2003 and future policy imperatives.

Question 6:

What do you understand by population composition?

Answer 6:

The structure of the population refers to population composition. The population composition helps in understanding the health conditions of people, their income levels, their occupation, their gender, the age group that they belong to, and their levels of education. Composition of population by their respective places of residence is an important indicator of social and economic characteristics. This becomes even more significant for a country where about 68.8 per cent of its total population lives in
