- Abstract

- Abstract. The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical fitness and health of sedentary, middle-aged men. The subjects were 20 men, aged 40-50 years, who were sedentary and had no history of cardiovascular disease. They were divided into two groups: a control group and an exercise group. The exercise group performed a 12-week training program consisting of three sessions per week, each lasting 30 minutes. The control group did not exercise. Physical fitness was measured using a variety of tests, including a 1.5-mile run, a 1.5-mile walk, a 1.5-mile swim, and a 1.5-mile bike ride. Health was measured using a variety of tests, including a blood pressure measurement, a heart rate measurement, and a cholesterol measurement. The results of the study showed that the exercise group had significantly better physical fitness and health than the control group after 12 weeks of training.
