Gregory Gregoriadis,2012-12-06 Successful drug use in biology and medicine is often prejudiced by the failure of drugs that are otherwise active in vitro to act as efficiently in vivo This is because in the living animal drugs must as a rule bypass or traverse organs membranes cells and molecules that stand between the site of administration and the site of action In practice however drugs can be toxic to normal tissues have limited or no access to the target and be prematurely excreted or inactivated There is now growing optimism that such problems may be resolved by the use of carrier systems that will not only protect the non target environment from the drugs they carry but also deliver them to where they are needed or facilitate their release there Carrier systems presently under investigation include antibodies glycoproteins cells reconstituted viruses and liposomes Recent advances in the chemistry of cell receptor and receptor recognising molecules Immunology and natural and artificial membranes have revealed a multitude of ways in which such carrier systems can be modified or improved upon Algebraic and Analytic Microlocal Analysis
