

Energy Pyramids - Tying it all Together

Background:

Energy pyramids represent the amount of energy available at each trophic level (producer, consumer).

Producers: Organisms that get energy from the sun by using photosynthesis to produce their own food. (Autotrophic organisms that synthesize their own food from inorganic substances)

Directions:

Look and read through the assignment. Materials will be given for this activity.

1. Use the materials provided with this activity to construct the energy pyramid.

Energy level is used to show the amount of energy available at each trophic level. Energy is highest at the bottom and lowest at the top. Organisms that eat organisms at lower trophic levels are called higher trophic levels.

2. Write down the organisms that live at each trophic level.

Remember, producers make their own food using energy from the sun. All other organisms eat producers or other organisms that eat producers.

3. Write down how much energy is available at each trophic level. (Remember, energy is lost at each level.)
