

Chapter 10: Models for Processing and the Understanding Process

Education 1980

2. Knowledge Base

1. What are the 10 key propositional processes?

1. Processing the sentence.
2. Processing words in all cases and in all positions.
3. Representing structure in continuous form, not with separate representations.
4. Representational processes and structural processes are different.
5. This needs to be used continuously. All patterns have exceptions.
6. An individual brings with himself the knowledge of the rules that will be needed to solve a task.
7. Subjects and languages operate systematically, but errors and specific failures reflect individuality.
8. In real situations, the representational processes will be used more continuously and to a greater extent than when using word lists presented in laboratory tests.
9. The age variable provides continuous evidence for the view that as children develop they learn about and process language, language and explanations.
10. To move from general to specific steps is possible since it is possible to build from knowledge up relationships for explanations as before for other kinds of tasks.
11. Two things that help in learning about grammar are explanations and relationships.
12. Two sources can be used: primary and secondary parallel sources, a subject engaged in language, or a parallel source available.
