Under Arizona Skies Bruce Brooks Pfeiffer,Victor E. Sidy,2011 Nestled among the cactus thickets and dry washes of the Arizona desert lies an intriguing landscape of architectural experiments Sometimes encompassing a paloverde tree or suspended many feet above the desert floor these small dwellings conceived by architecture students as alternatives to tents and dormitory rooms embrace and in their own way celebrate the natural rugged terrain surrounding Frank Lloyd Wright's Taliesin West The earliest shelters were created by adventurous apprentices at the Taliesin Fellowship a school for architects established by Frank Lloyd Wright in the mid 1930s After Wright's death a more conventional school the Frank Lloyd Wright School of Architecture was established and the practice of designing and building a personal dwelling became a unique feature of the school's curriculum Wright insisted that there would be no armchair architects at his school apprentices would learn through hard work and first hand experience The response to this directive has been astonishingly creative In addition to honing their design and drafting skills students comb the desert for dwelling sites consider the effects of extreme temperature change and winter rain gather construction materials from surrounding hills and dry riverbeds and thoroughly explore what Wright termed organic architecture Collected in Under Arizona Skies are photographs and architectural plans of the most exemplary student shelters built at Taliesin West as well as personal accounts written by Victor E Sidy Dean of the Frank Lloyd Wright School of Architecture and Bruce Brooks Pfeiffer Director of the Frank Lloyd Wright Archives Truth Against the World Frank Lloyd Wright, 1987 This is a unique and comprehensive collection of the significant speeches of Frank Lloyd Wright The speeches presented spanning nearly six decades touch on Wright's ideas on organic architecture the machine improving the human condition honor education democracy city planning and his Broadacre City in particular and government Profusely illustrated with over 300 photographs and drawings most of which have never been published A companion volume to the author's collection of conversations and interviews with Wright The Master Architect
