

Animal Farm Revision Guide

Chapter I

After lights out, all the animals gather in the big barn to hear old Major communicate his strange dream of the previous night. Before doing so, he imparts his life learnings: that the existence of animals is one of toil and drudgery and that Man is the enemy; if animals are to ever achieve better lives then they must unite against Man. A vote is held to ascertain whether wild creatures such as rats should be considered comrades; though an overwhelming majority votes that they are, there are a few in opposition.

His dream was the remembrance

Power and Control

Power means to many things:

- political power and government;
- strength, resistance and physical prowess;
- knowledge and wisdom (power to the people).

Power is not in itself a bad thing, but with great power comes great responsibility... who might imagine who would have the right to exercise the control of power? And should it be? If only one, and simply, if Pasha Pasha's Uncle Sam had been the farmer there it might have been an entirely different story.

Orwell's primary concern is the abuse of power. Starting with his point, the deluged farmer regards those in the power and thereby makes himself. Even with his own mind, he is completely the ruler of his own domain. He is the one who has the power to shape the lives of his animals and to make them do what he wants for the principle of Autocracy. But this must be the first step in a functioning system of government and this brings us to the first of the two main points of the story: the abuse of power. Orwell is not a fan of power, but he is a fan of the power of the people. He is a fan of the power of the people to control the power of the state. He is a fan of the power of the people to control the power of the state. He is a fan of the power of the people to control the power of the state.

It is ironic that Napoleon gains absolute power, which has been the most obvious power.

Context

As we have already seen, Napoleon's rise to power mirrors that of Stalin, who stepped out of the shadow of more established powers such as Lenin (the first leader of the Soviet Union) and Khrushchev (the second leader of the Soviet Union). Orwell's story is a critique of the power of the state and the power of the people. He is a fan of the power of the people to control the power of the state. He is a fan of the power of the people to control the power of the state. He is a fan of the power of the people to control the power of the state.
