identified by many researchers and academics in the past years This importance is also predominant in the telecommunication industry and consequently the Nigerian telecom industry This book attempts to assess and analyze the variables that influence a mobile phone subscriber's loyalty and how Nigerian service providers can enhance this loyalty The study is based on a survey that uses the quantitative approach A structured questionnaire was developed and personally administered to a sample of University of Ilorin students across four major GSM operators in the country Four hundred 400 respondents were sampled through a stratified random sampling Out of this three hundred and forty eight 348 copies of the questionnaire constituting an 87% response rate could be used for the analysis Of the eleven 11 operational factors that were used to assess loyalty of customers in the Nigeria Mobile Telecoms industry all variables except Brand Image and Service Centre Quality were found to be capable of influencing customer loyalty and also considered as the most important loyalty variables in the industry The unavailability of Mobile Number Portability was found to be a prominent factor in tying consumers down to service providers while the generally low satisfaction with the present state of service delivery in the industry also plays a role Therefore the retention which the service providers were able to enjoy can be described as circumstantial The given recommendations include that the service providers embark upon drives that will reduce dropped calls to a bare minimum that they improve call quality and that they develop SMS delivery standards
