new assessment of the evolution of avian reproductive biology in light of recent research the book goes on to cover four broad areas the nest the egg incubation and the study of avian reproduction New research on nest structures egg traits and life history is incorporated whilst contemporary methodologies such as self contained temperature probes and citizen science are also discussed Applied chapters describe how biological knowledge can be applied to challenges such as urbanisation and climate change The book concludes by suggesting priorities for future research This book builds upon the foundations laid down by Charles Deeming s 2002 work Avian Incubation available for readers of this book to access online for free much of which remains relevant today Read in conjunction with this previous volume it provides an up to date and thorough review of egg biology nest function and incubation behaviour which will be an essential resource for students of avian biology as well as both professional and amateur ornithologists working in the field of avian reproduction

Looking at Ribozymes Benoît Masquida, 2024-02-21 Behind the neologism ribozymes lies a family of fascinating molecules ribo enzymes which have been relatively little studied These catalytically active RNAs are found in all strata of life from viruses to the human genome At the end of the 1970s the discovery of a catalytic RNA nestled in an intron followed by another involved in the maturation of transfer RNAs led to the discovery of new ribozymes and the transition from a strictly proteocentric vision inherited from the dogma of molecular biology to a more nucleocentric one Since then a variety of ribozymes have been identified in genomes where their functions often remain mysterious Looking at Ribozymes traces the discovery of these molecules and presents a picture of their functional diversity catalytic mechanisms and distribution within the tree of life
