- Bank holding companies have a corporate structure in which a parent company owns many subsidiaries in different financial industries.
  1. Subsidiaries engage in banking, securities, real estate and insurance business.
  2. Subsidiaries are separate legal entities so the bankruptcy of one does not mean losses for the other.
  3. Losses at one subsidiary do result in losses for shareholders of the holding company.
  4. Banks mostly protected from risk of sister companies.

Advantages: Protects depositors & bank capital from market risk. One stop shopping can help build relationships.
