Physical and Biological Processing of Images O. J. Braddick, A. C. Sleight, 2012-12-06 This book consists of papers presented at an international symposium sponsored and organised by The Rank Prize Funds and held at The Royal Society London on 27-29 September 1982 Since the inception of the Funds the Trustees and their Scientific Advisory Committee on Optoelectronics have considered that the scope of optoelectronics should extend to cover the question of how the eye transduces and processes optical information The Funds have aimed to organise symposia on topics which because of their interdisciplinary nature were not well covered by other regular international scientific meetings It was therefore very appropriate that the 1982 symposium should be on Physical and Biological Processing of Images The purpose of the symposium was to bring together scientists working on the physiology and psychology of visual perception with those developing machine systems for image processing and understanding The papers were planned in such a way as to emphasise questions of how image analysing systems can be organised as well as the principles underlying them rather than the detailed biophysics and structure of sensory systems or the specific design of approaches have been developed by researchers for measuring intra household decisionmaking Most use quantitative surveys that often rely on a standard set of questions that inquire about who contributes to key household decisions or women s abilities to participate in these decisions Such questions have been criticized for focusing too much on the identity of the decision maker and less on understanding why and how decisions get made within the household and on the multiple facets of women s roles in decision making processes<sup>1</sup> To address the shortcomings of current approaches we an interdisciplinary group of applied gender and agriculture researchers developed a transdisciplinary and mixed methods approach that can be adapted across livelihoods and geographies to measure intra household decision making and shed light on the who why and how of important household decisions This guide describes the transdisciplinary process that was used to develop the mixed methods research tool for understanding and measuring intra household decision making In our approach we focus on measuring who makes which decisions how and why and how this influences food nutrition and economic security outcomes This guide therefore provides a base for other researchers and development practitioners to develop a context specific mixed methods tool for understanding and measuring intra household decision making
