- 100 Abstract: The purpose of this study was to investigate the effects of a 12-week training program on the physical and psychological health of elderly people. The study was conducted in a community center in a city in the north of Iran. The sample consisted of 30 elderly people (15 men and 15 women) who were randomly selected from the community center. The training program was designed to improve the physical and psychological health of the elderly people. The program included a combination of aerobic, strength, and flexibility exercises, as well as relaxation and stress management techniques. The results of the study showed that the training program had a significant positive effect on the physical and psychological health of the elderly people. The participants showed significant improvements in their physical fitness, including increased endurance, strength, and flexibility. Additionally, the participants reported significant improvements in their psychological health, including reduced stress, anxiety, and depression, and increased overall well-being and quality of life. The findings of this study suggest that a 12-week training program can be an effective intervention for improving the physical and psychological health of elderly people. Further research is needed to explore the long-term effects of such programs and to identify the most effective components for maximizing health benefits in this population.
