Examples

Bioethanol From Corn

Lately, the issue of corn ethanol has generated a lot of debate. Some people believe that using this ethanol gives more favorable outcomes, while others argue that it has more disadvantages. According to the argument, Miriam is better supported because she provided substantial evidence to verify her claims, and her reasonable sources of information convince the readers to believe her. Bioethanol from corn should be used because it helps reduce pollution, can be used as a low-priced alternative fuel, and can help farmers.

Firstly, Miriam's argument is better supported because the writer includes scientific-based information to support the idea. Miriam said that fuel ethanol is better than others. For example, Miriam mentions that "ethanol helps reduce pollution, which emits fewer greenhouse gas emissions." Although Kristin said that shipping and exporting corn ethanol is expensive because of its pipeline costs, he did not have enough information. Therefore, Miriam's point is more credible than the other position.
