Information Hiding David Aucsmith, 2003-05-20 The mid 1990s saw an exciting convergence of a number of different information protection technologies whose theme was the hiding as opposed to encryption of information. Copyright marking schemes are about hiding either copyright notices or individual serial numbers imperceptibly in digital audio and video as a component in intellectual property protection systems. anonymous communication is another area of rapid growth with people designing systems for electronic cash, digital elections and privacy in mobile communications. security researchers are also interested in stray communication channels such as those which arise via shared resources in operating systems or the physical leakage of information through radio frequency emissions and finally many workers in these fields drew inspiration from classical hidden communication methods such as steganography and spread spectrum radio. The first international workshop on this new emergent discipline of information hiding was organised by Ross Anderson and held at the Isaac Newton Institute, Cambridge from the 30th May to the 1st June 1996 and was judged by attendees to be a successful and significant event. In addition to a number of research papers we had invited talks from David Kahn on the history of steganography and from Gus Simmons on the history of subliminal channels. We also had a number of discussion sessions culminating in a series of votes on common terms and definitions. These papers and talks together with minutes of the discussion can be found in the proceedings which are published in this series as Volume 1174. Artificial Intelligence and Security Xingming Sun, Jinwei Wang, Elisa Bertino, 2020-09-12 The 3 volume set CCIS 1252 until CCIS 1254 constitutes the refereed proceedings of the 6th International Conference on Artificial Intelligence and Security ICAIS 2020 which was held in Hohhot, China in July 2020. The conference was formerly called International Conference on Cloud Computing and Security with the acronym ICCCS. The total of 178 full papers and 8 short papers presented in this 3 volume proceedings was carefully reviewed and selected from 1064 submissions. The papers were organized in topical sections as follows: Part I artificial intelligence; Part II artificial intelligence; Internet of things; information security; Part III information security; big data and cloud computing; information processing.

Computer Algebra Recipes Richard H. Enns, George C. McGuire, 2007-02-26. Computer algebra systems are revolutionizing the teaching, the learning, and the exploration of science. Not only can students and researchers work through mathematical models more efficiently and with fewer errors than with pencil and paper; they can also easily explore both analytically and numerically more complex and computationally intensive models. Aimed at science and engineering undergraduates at the sophomore/junior level, this introductory guide to the mathematical models of science is filled with examples from a wide variety of disciplines, including biology, economics, medicine, engineering, game theory, mathematics, physics, and chemistry. The topics are organized into the Appetizers (dealing with graphical aspects), the Entrees (concentrating on symbolic computation), and the Desserts (illustrating numerical simulation). The heart of the text is a large number of computer algebra recipes based on the Maple 10 software system. These have been designed not only to provide tools for problem solving but also to stimulate the reader's imagination. Associated with each recipe is a scientific model or method and an interesting or amusing story accompanied with a thought-provoking quote that leads the reader through the various steps of the recipe. Each section of recipes is followed by a set of problems that readers can use to check their understanding or to develop the topic further. This text is the first of two volumes; the advanced guide aimed at junior/senior/graduate level students dealing with more advanced differential equation models. Enrichment and Chapter Investigation Masters Olmstead, Lynch, 2000-04. Straight To The Point - AutoCAD 2007 Dinesh Maidasani, 2007. Mastering AutoCAD 2014 and AutoCAD LT 2014 George Omura, Brian C.
