Teaching IFRS Richard M.S. Wilson, Ralph Adler, 2013-09-13 The increasing pace of global conformance towards the adoption of International Financial Reporting Standards (IFRS) highlights the need for accounting students as well as accounting practitioners to be conversant with IFRS. Teaching IFRS offers expert descriptions of and insights into the IFRS convergence process from a teaching and learning perspective. Hence, this book is both timely and likely to have considerable impact in providing guidance for those who teach financial reporting around the world. The contents of the book come from authoritative sources and offer something distinctive to complement the existing textbooks which typically focus on the technical aspects of IFRS and their adoption. Drawing upon the experiences of those who have sought to introduce IFRS related classroom innovations and the associated student outcomes achieved therefrom, the book offers suggestions about how to design and deliver courses dealing with IFRS and catalogues extensive listings of IFRS related teaching resources to support those courses. This book was originally published as a special issue of Accounting Education, an international journal.

The Limits of Institutional Reform in Development Matt Andrews, 2013-02-11 Developing countries commonly adopt reforms to improve their governments yet they usually fail to produce more functional and effective governments Andrews argues that reforms often fail to make governments better because they are introduced as signals to gain short term support These signals introduce unrealistic best practices that do not fit developing country contexts and are not considered relevant by implementing agents The result is a set of new forms that do not function However there are realistic solutions emerging from institutional reforms in some developing countries Lessons from these experiences suggest that reform limits although challenging to adopt can be overcome by focusing change on problem solving through an incremental process that involves multiple agents

Transparency in Global Environmental Governance Aarti

Gupta, Michael Mason, 2014-07-11 A critical assessment of whether transparency is a broadly transformative force in global environmental governance or plays a more limited role Transparency openness secured through greater availability of information is increasingly seen as part of the solution to a complex array of economic political and ethical problems in an interconnected world The transparency turn in global environmental governance in particular is seen in a range of international agreements voluntary disclosure initiatives and public private partnerships This is the first book to investigate whether transparency in global environmental governance is in fact a broadly transformative force or plays a more limited instrumental role After three conceptual context setting chapters the book examines ten specific and diverse instances of governance by disclosure These include state led mandatory disclosure initiatives that rely on such tools as prior informed consent and monitoring measuring reporting and verification and private or private public largely voluntary efforts that include such corporate transparency initiatives as the Carbon Disclosure Project and such certification schemes as the Forest Stewardship Council The cases which focus on issue areas including climate change biodiversity biotechnology natural resource exploitation and chemicals demonstrate that although transparency is ubiquitous its effects are limited and often specific to particular contexts The book explores in what circumstances transparency can offer the possibility of a new emancipatory politics in global environmental governance

The New Global Rulers Tim Büthe, Walter Mattli, 2013-07-21

Global private regulations who wins who loses and why Over the past two decades governments have delegated extensive regulatory authority to international private sector organizations This internationalization and privatization of rule making has been motivated not only by the economic benefits of common rules for global markets but also by the realization that government regulators often lack the expertise and resources to deal with increasingly complex and urgent regulatory tasks The New Global Rulers examines who writes the rules in international private organizations as well as who wins who loses and why Tim Büthe and Walter Mattli examine three powerful global private regulators the International Accounting Standards Board which develops financial reporting rules used by corporations in more than a hundred countries and the International Organization for Standardization and the International Electrotechnical Commission which account for 85 percent of all international product standards B the and Mattli offer both a new framework for understanding global private regulation and detailed empirical analyses of such regulation based on multi country multi industry business surveys They find that global rule making by technical experts is highly political and that even though rule making has shifted to the international level domestic institutions remain crucial Influence in this form of global private governance is not a function of the economic power of states but of the ability of domestic standard setters to provide timely information and speak with a single voice B the and Mattli show how domestic institutions abilities differ particularly between the two main standardization players the United States and Europe
