

Maxicut 3A Heavy Duty Gear Shaping Machine

The 3A machine is a general purpose heavy-duty machine having a standard capacity of 18in pcd work piece with a 4in diameter cutter and a maximum face width of 5in external gear. This machine has also been used extensively in the automotive industry for cutting truck and tractor external and internal ring gears and for cutting stacked banks of starter ring gears. The machine can be very quickly changed over from conventional down cutting to up cutting and is recommended for general engineering shops where a variety of external and internal spur gears, stem gears, chain sprockets, segments, and special shapes have to be machined.

The machine is particularly suitable for commercial gear cutting up to 3 diametral pitch ( $8\frac{1}{2}$  module) to high quality standards and the dial feed box gives freedom of choice up to four automatically controlled cuts for the heavier

The controls for the saddle, closing and locking the work slide and the starting switch to the motor are arranged within easy reach of the operator.

The required speed and feed are quickly obtained with direct reading hand wheel selectors.

Lubrication of the cutter spindle is effected by pump from an oil well on the rear of the cutter head. The main gear box is lubricated by splash from a reservoir within the box. All other moving parts are provided with grease nipples.

The cutter head has a much longer sliding movement than the No. 2 series of machines and is provided with an adjustable crankshaft driving a connecting rod which oscillates a splined shaft running the full length of the machine slideways. The vertical cutter spindle is plain bearing mounted in a sliding rack reciprocated by a pinion on the splined shaft.

The crankshaft is driven by a four-speed gear box from a 3 h.p. motor in the base via two-step vee belt pulleys and clutch giving a range of eight speeds from 50 to 300 strokes per minute.
