

My Educational Philosophy

Cathryn Hart

Teaching is a wonderfully challenging profession with a broad range of children entering the classroom and an ever-increasing demand for accountability, an expanded curriculum and testing. There are many ways to be an effective teacher. It requires commitment to the students, creation of a caring classroom, effective communication skills, ongoing reflection, flexibility, and collaboration with colleagues. The focus of my educational philosophy is to create an open and inviting learning community.

I view an open classroom as a place where each student is welcomed and recognized as a unique and valued person. Children must have a sense of belonging before they can be learners. I incorporate ideas from research on learning styles and multiple intelligences to adapt the curriculum to the strengths of diverse students. So I use a blend of teaching methods such as hands-on activities, verbal explanations, discussion groups, demonstrations, learning centers and peer tutoring. I also use student portfolios and a variety of assessment formats to individualize student work. Teachers must be sensitive to children from different ethnic backgrounds and value the opportunity to share multiple heritages. Therefore, I want my classroom to be a place where each child is respected and diversity is celebrated.

I view an inviting classroom as a place where students are motivated to learn. There are many ways to motivate students including praise, success experiences, clear statements of expectations, learning games, token economies and goal setting. Learning takes place within a social context and students learn more by active participation than by listening. So I balance cooperative learning groups and hands-on activities with direct instruction. I see myself as a constructivist teacher who shares the responsibility for learning with the students.

I am excited about entering the teaching profession and come with a rich background. I have worked in schools as a substitute teacher, K3 aide and media technician. As the parent of two teenagers, I have spent many hours volunteering in the classroom. I have also worked as a pharmacologist in a cancer research lab and as an occupational therapist in a rehabilitation center. I have a passion for learning that I am eager to share with students and a strong belief in the public school system.
