

There are two types of pumps, both of which are described in Chapter 10. The first is the centrifugal pump, which is the most common type of pump. It consists of a horizontal shaft with a flywheel on the left and a vertical shaft on the right. The second type is the reciprocating pump, which is a vertical shaft with a flywheel on the left and a horizontal shaft on the right. Both types of pumps are used in a variety of applications, including water supply, irrigation, and industrial processes.
