Open Access and the Library Anja Oberländer, Torsten Reimer, 2019-04-04 Libraries are places of learning and knowledge creation Over the last two decades digital technology and the changes that came with it have accelerated this transformation to a point where evolution starts to become a revolution The wider Open Science movement and Open Access in particular is one of these changes and is already having a profound impact Under the subscription model the role of libraries was to buy or license content on behalf of their users and then act as gatekeepers to regulate access on behalf of rights holders In a world where all research is open the role of the library is shifting from licensing and disseminating to facilitating and supporting the publishing process itself This requires a fundamental shift in terms of structures tasks and skills It also changes the idea of a library's collection Under the subscription model contemporary collections largely equal content bought from publishers Under an open model the collection is more likely to be the content created by the users of the library researchers staff students etc content that is now curated by the library Instead of selecting external content libraries have to understand the content created by their own users and help them to make it publicly available be it through a local repository payment of article processing charges or through advice and guidance Arguably this is an overly simplified model that leaves aside special collections and other areas Even so it highlights the changes that research libraries are undergoing changes that are likely to accelerate as a result of initiatives such as Plan at Brisbane Australia during September 22-23, 2010. IMIA is an independent organization established under Swiss law in 1989. The organization originated in 1967 from Technical Committee 4 of IFIP, that is a non-governmental non-profit umbrella organization for national societies working in the field of information processing. It was established in 1960 under the auspices of UNESCO following the First World Computer Congress held in Paris in 1959. Today IFIP has several types of members and maintains friendly connections to specialized agencies of the UN system and non-governmental organizations. Technical work, which is the heart of IFIP's activity, is managed by a series of Technical Committees. Due to strong needs for promoting informatics in healthcare and the rapid progress of information and communication technology, IMIA President Reinhold Haux proposed to strengthen the collaboration with IFIP. The IMIA General Assembly (GA) approved the move, and an IMIA Vice President (VP) for special services, Hiroshi Takeda, was assigned as a liaison to IFIP at Brisbane during MEDINFO2007, where the 40th birthday of IMIA was celebrated.
