Abstract: This paper discusses the importance of the role of the state in the development of the economy, particularly in the context of the transition from a centrally planned economy to a market economy. It examines the challenges faced by the state in this process and the role of the state in providing infrastructure, education, and health care. The paper also discusses the importance of the state in maintaining social order and stability, and the role of the state in promoting economic growth and development. The paper concludes that the state plays a crucial role in the development of the economy, and that the state must be able to provide the necessary infrastructure, education, and health care to support economic growth and development.
