fragmentation and global value chains In the third part the book discusses different currency and exchange rate regimes and their implications for a country's balance of payments and foreign exchange reserves Drawing upon the basic theories it studies expenditure reducing and expenditure switching policies to correct for BoP imbalances under a pegged exchange rate regime Finally some reflections on the choice of exchange rate regime and optimum currency area wind up discussions of monetary issues in international economics

Industrial Policy for National Champions Oliver Falck, Christian Gollier, Ludger Woessmann, 2011 Prominent economists present the pros and cons of government's subsidizing or protecting firms that are national champions Governments around the world are deeply divided about the proper role of industrial policy with some politicians arguing for hands off governance and others supporting government intervention to promote national champions firms that receive government support for both political and economic reasons In this volume prominent economists present the pros and cons of government support for national champions The contributors use the rigor of economic models in their studies offering a quantitative perspective that complements and extends existing qualitative studies and focus on issues emerging from the European Union's substantial degree of market integration Many arguments in favor of champions promoting policies are made in a dynamic context so the book first presents chapters that take a dynamic economy view then presents chapters that examine the political economy of the decision process and finally offers classical static equilibrium arguments The richness of the different models provides a deeper understanding of industrial policy than could any model alone What becomes clear from these different perspectives nevertheless is that it is difficult to make a general case in favor of policies promoting national champions on purely economic grounds and that these policies are best understood in political terms

Japanese Manufacturing Investment in Europe Roger Strange, 2002-09-11 Japanese manufacturing investment in the European Community has grown dramatically over the last twenty years At first instances of investment were few concentrated in a small number of industrial sectors But since the mid 1980s there has been a surge of investment in a much wider range of industries This volume details the growth of Japanese manufacturing investment in Europe in fourteen industrial sectors The impact of Japanese competition and direct investment on European industries is considered in the context of the emergence of the three major trading blocs the United States Japan and the EC Roger Strange concludes by making important policy recommendations and arguing for the need for a new theoretical framework for assessing the political economy of foreign direct investment
