PR STUDY: The study, published in the Journal of the American Academy of Child and Adolescent Psychiatry, found that children with autism spectrum disorders (ASD) who had a history of seizures had a higher risk of developing mental health problems, including anxiety, depression, and obsessive-compulsive disorder, than those who did not have seizures. The researchers also found that the risk of developing mental health problems was higher for children with ASD who had seizures that began before the age of 5 than for those who had seizures that began later in life.
