Productivity in Higher Education Caroline M. Hoxby,Kevin Stange,2020-01-10 How do the benefits of higher education compare with its costs and how does this comparison vary across individuals and institutions These questions are fundamental to quantifying the productivity of the education sector The studies in Productivity in Higher Education use rich and novel administrative data modern econometric methods and careful institutional analysis to explore productivity issues The authors examine the returns to undergraduate education differences in costs by major the productivity of for profit schools the productivity of various types of faculty and of outcomes the effects of online education on the higher education market and the ways in which the productivity of different institutions responds to market forces The analyses recognize five key challenges to assessing productivity in higher education the potential for multiple student outcomes in terms of skills earnings invention and employment the fact that colleges and universities are multiproduct firms that conduct varied activities across many domains the fact that students select which school to attend based in part on their aptitude the difficulty of attributing outcomes to individual institutions when students attend more than one and the possibility that some of the benefits of higher education may arise from the system as a whole rather than from a single institution The findings and the approaches illustrated can facilitate decision making processes in higher education 2009-2010 Li Yuming, Li Wei, 2015-10-16 China with the world's largest population numerous ethnic groups and vast geographical space is also rich in languages Since 2006 China's State Language Commission has been publishing annual reports on what is called language life in China These reports cover language policy and planning initiatives at the national provincial and local levels new trends in language use in a variety of social domains and major events concerning languages in mainland China Hong Kong Macau and Taiwan Now for the first time these reports are available in English for anyone interested in Chinese language and linguistics China's language education and social policies as well as everyday language use among the ordinary people in China The invaluable data contained in these reports provide an essential reference to researchers professionals policy makers and China watchers
