P 4.52 [a] This node voltage method requires summing the currents at two super-nodes in terms of three node voltages and using two constraint equations to reduce the number of equations to two variables. Of the equations at the bottom of the circuit we need only the middle one. Thus the node voltage equations are

$$\begin{aligned} V_1 - V_2 &= 10 \text{ V} \\ V_1 + V_2 - V_3 &= 0 \end{aligned}$$

Thus instead of using two KVL equations the constraint equations, the current in the $30 \text{ }\Omega$ source is obtained by summing the currents at either terminal of the source.

CONCLUSIONS

The least-squares method requires estimating the voltages across the two resistors not constituting current sources in terms of four mesh currents. In addition the voltages controlling the dependent sources must be expressed in terms of the mesh currents. Thus the constraint equations are more complicated, and the reduction to two equations and two unknowns involves more algebraic manipulations. The current in the 20 V source is found by substituting two mesh currents.

However, the constrained equations are easier to manipulate in the polar coordinate system. It is the preferred approach.
