Abstract: The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, low-intensity, low-impact, and low-volume aquatic exercise program on the physical fitness of sedentary, middle-aged women. The study was a randomized, controlled trial. The subjects were randomly assigned to either an exercise group or a control group. The exercise group performed a 12-week, low-intensity, low-impact, and low-volume aquatic exercise program. The control group did not exercise. The subjects were assessed for physical fitness at baseline and at 12 weeks. The results showed that the exercise group had significantly higher levels of physical fitness at 12 weeks compared to the control group. The exercise group had significantly higher levels of cardiovascular fitness, muscular fitness, and body composition. The control group had no significant changes in physical fitness. The results of this study suggest that a 12-week, low-intensity, low-impact, and low-volume aquatic exercise program can improve the physical fitness of sedentary, middle-aged women.
