

The Great Gatsby

F. Scott Fitzgerald's American Dream

Chloe Widdows, Sept. 2016

American was a struggle after making a complete transition to adult financial independence as soon as possible.

Chapter 1

1. Analyze the effect of language in the first sentences and first three paragraphs creating the "careful glare" of Nick's carefully:

Disaffection of the first sentence by its introduction the social ideas of the paragraphs reflect young adults and nothing. The structure's paragraphs helps reveal that America will remain the same after war.

2. Explain how this statement characterizes the author's "American dream" as something that is impossible to achieve.

Characterization of American dream is that it's a dream that can't be achieved by anyone.

3. Explain the significance of the author's social criticism.

4. Explain the author's "careful" style and the effect of creating a sense of mystery and social criticism. They are more of a dream world.

5. Explain the significance of the author's statement that "the green is more serious than the gold."

6. Explain how the author's statement that "the green is more serious than the gold" is a social criticism. The author is saying that the green is more serious than the gold.

7. "Considering, however, that the green is more serious than the gold," the author is saying that the green is more serious than the gold.

8. "The green is more serious than the gold," the author is saying that the green is more serious than the gold.

9. "The green is more serious than the gold," the author is saying that the green is more serious than the gold.

Chapter 2

10. "Without atmosphere or feeling is revealed by the paragraph beginning 'with the resounding assurance...' " ending with "the green is more serious than the gold." The author is saying that the green is more serious than the gold.

11. "The green is more serious than the gold," the author is saying that the green is more serious than the gold.
