Making Minds Less Well Educated Than Our Own Roger C. Schank, 2004-04-26 In the author's words This book is an honest attempt to understand what it means to be educated in today's world His argument is this No matter how important science and technology seem to industry or government or indeed to the daily life of people as a society we believe that those educated in literature history and other humanities are in some way better informed more knowing and somehow more worthy of the descriptor well educated This 19th century conception of the educated mind weighs heavily on our notions on how we educate our young When we focus on intellectual and scholarly issues in high school as opposed to issues such as communications basic psychology or child raising we are continuing to rely on outdated notions of the educated mind that come from elitist notions of who is to be educated and what that means To accommodate the realities of today's world it is necessary to change these elitist notions We need to rethink what it means to be educated and begin to focus on a new conception of the very idea of education Students need to learn how to think not how to accomplish tasks such as passing standardized tests and reciting rote facts In this engaging book Roger C Schank sets forth the premises of his argument cites its foundations in the Great Books themselves and illustrates it with examples from an experimental curriculum that has been used in graduate schools and with K 12 students Making Minds Less Well Educated Than Our Own is essential reading for scholars and students in the learning sciences instructional design curriculum theory and planning educational policy school reform philosophy of education higher education and anyone interested in what it means to be educated in today s world

Mathematics, 2004 Juggling Flaming Chain Saws Joanne M. Marshall, Jeffrey S. Brooks, Kathleen M. Brown, Leslie Hazle Bussey, Bonnie Fusarelli, Catherine A. Lugg, Latish C. Reed, George Theoharis, Mark A. Gooden, 2012-11-01 Challenges of work life balance in the academy stem from policies and practices which remain from the time when higher education was populated mostly by married White male faculty Those faculty were successful in their academic work because they depended upon the support of their wives to manage many of the not work aspects of their lives Imagine a tweedy middle aged white man coming home from the university to greet his wife and children and eat the dinner she s prepared for him and then disappearing into his study for the rest of the evening with his pipe to write and think great thoughts If that professor ever existed he is now emeritus Juggling Flaming Chainsaws is the first book in a new series with Information Age Publishing on these challenges of managing academic work and not work It uses the methodology of autoethnography to introduce the work life issues faced by scholars in educational leadership While the experiences of scholars in this volume are echoed across other fields in higher education educational leadership is unique because of its emphasis on preparing people for leadership roles within higher education and for preK 12 schools Authors include people at different places on their career and life course trajectory people who are partnered and single gay and straight with children and without caring for elders and managing illness They hail from different geographic areas of the nation different ethnic backgrounds and different types of institutions What all have in common is commitment to engaging with this topic to reflecting deeply upon their own experience and to sharing that experience with the rest of us
