

The Digestive System

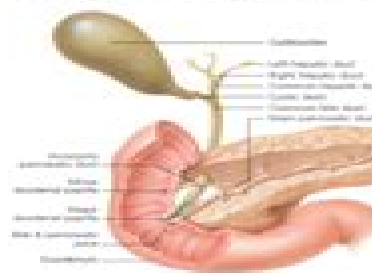

What is the digestive system?

The digestive system, or gastrointestinal tract, is a tract of organs that is responsible for digesting and absorbing nutrients from food. Food enters through the mouth, is broken down in the stomach, and then moves through the small intestine, where nutrients are absorbed. The digestive system also includes accessory organs that help in the process, such as the liver, pancreas, and gallbladder.

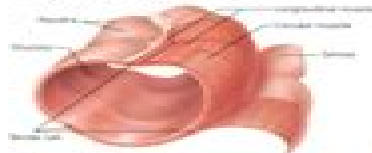

Liver, pancreas & gallbladder

After leaving the stomach, chyme moves into the duodenum, the first part of the small intestine, where it is mixed with bile secreted by the liver and pancreatic juice secreted by the pancreas. This area is a mixing region on the intestine where the duodenum opens into the descending large intestine. Bile from the liver, secreted into the duodenum, helps to break down fats in the gallbladder.

Layers of large intestine

Large intestine

The large intestine consists of the cecum, the colon, and the rectum. It is responsible for absorbing water and electrolytes from the remaining indigestible food matter. The large intestine is divided into the cecum, ascending colon, transverse colon, descending colon, and sigmoid colon.

Peristaltic action

Food material is pushed through the digestive system by a series of powerful muscular contractions called peristalsis. These contractions move the material forward and the food is then, when the stomach has relaxed.

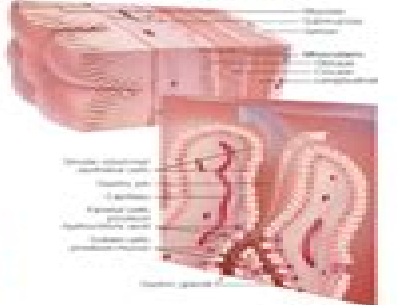

The mouth & salivary glands

Chewing, the mechanical action of the food, is called mastication. Saliva, secreted by the salivary glands, moistens the food and helps in the digestion of starches. The salivary glands are located in the mouth and are responsible for the production of saliva.

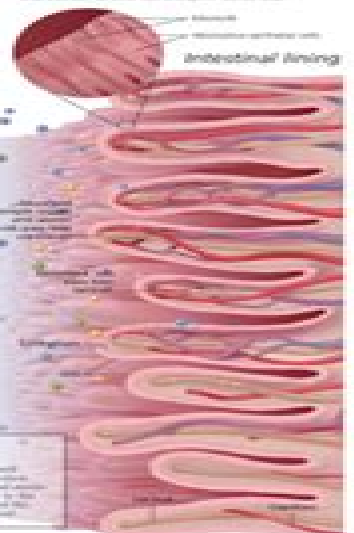

The stomach

The stomach is a large, muscular organ that is responsible for the digestion of food. It is located in the upper left part of the abdomen. The stomach wall is composed of several layers, including the mucosa, submucosa, muscle, and serosa.

Small intestine

The small intestine is a long, coiled tube that is responsible for the digestion of food. It is located in the central part of the abdomen. The small intestine is divided into three parts: the duodenum, jejunum, and ileum.

Absorption

The small intestine is responsible for the absorption of nutrients from the food. The villi on the inner lining of the small intestine increase the surface area for absorption.
