Picco, 2003-06-30 Recent years have witnessed the appearance of new paradigms for designing distributed applications where the application components can be relocated dynamically across the hosts of the network This form of code mobility lays the foundation for a new generation of technologies architectures models and applications in which the location at which the code is executed comes under the control of the designer rather than simply being a configuration accident Among the various flavors of mobile code the mobile agent paradigm has become particularly popular Mobile agents are programs able to determine autonomously their own migration to a different host and still retain their code and state or at least a portion thereof Thus distributed computations do not necessarily unfold as a sequence of requests and replies between clients and remote servers rather they encompass one or more visits of one or more mobile agents to the nodes involved Mobile code and mobile agents hold the potential to shape the next generation of technologies and models for distributed computation The first steps of this process are already evident today Web applets provide a case for the least sophisticated form of mobile code Java based distributed middleware makes creating use of mobile code and the first commercial applications using mobile agents are starting to appear
