Guthke,1999 Why is it that in some cultures and times literature folklore and art commonly represent death as a man in others as a woman Karl S Guthke shows that these choices which often contradict the grammatical gender of the word death in the language concerned are neither arbitrary nor accidental In earlier centuries the gender of the figure of death contributed to the interpretation of biblical narrative in particular whether the original sin was that of Adam or Eve and also reflected the importance of the classical figure of Thanatos More recently the gender of death as angel lover or bride whether terrifying or welcome has carried powerful psychological and social connotations Tracing the gender of representations of death in art and literature from medieval times to the present day Guthke offers astonishing new insights into the nature and perception of the Western self in its cultural intellectual and literary context The Kiss of God Michael Fishbane,Michael A. Fishbane,1994 The lines of Michael Fishbane's book trace the spiritual face of Judaism in one of its many appearances. Fishbane explores the quest for spiritual perfection in early rabbinic sources and in Jewish philosophy and mysticism. The kiss of God, a symbol for union with God, and the ritual practices of meditation and performance connected with it are presented. The book identifies a persistent passion for religious perfection expressed as the love of God unto death itself. The masters of the tradition cultivated this ideal in all periods, in diverse genres, and in different modes. Rabbinic law and midrash, medieval philosophy and mysticism, public and private ritual, all contributed to its development. Rooted in the understanding that the spiritual life requires discipline, the sages set up different ladders of ascension. For some, the Law itself was the means of spiritual growth; for others, more private practices were built upon its foundation. But all agreed that the purification of desire and the perfection of the soul offered the hope of personal salvation. None denied the historical redemption of the nation.
