

(8) Lock valve operation

The lock valve is housed in between each port of the control valve connected to arm cylinder rod side (R) and arm cylinder head side (H) and the arm spool and boom spool, and reduces the leaking due to holding pressure caused by each cylinder.

1. At boom spool neutral position (Arm spool makes the same operation.)

When boom spool (301) is set to neutral position, spool (511) of lock valve selector is held on the left side as shown in the figure. At this position, passages Sa and Sb are connected each other at the inside of bushing (541) and on the perimeter of spool (511). Therefore in spring chamber (RH) of lock valve poppet, the holding pressure receiving from boom cylinder head side (H) passes from passage Sa to bushing (541) spool (511) and is connected through passage Sb, consequently the lock valve poppet (514) is kept pressed the lower side as shown in the below Fig. and restricts the leaking to the minimum.
