As they learn about mathematics, children are also learning about themselves: who they are, who they might become. We can choose to listen or not to what children have to say about learning mathematics. Such choices constitute us in relations of power. Mathematical know-how is widely regarded as essential not only to the life chances of individuals but also to the health of communities and the economic well-being of nations. With the globalisation of education in an increasingly market-oriented world, mathematics has received intensified attention in the first decade of the twenty-first century with a shifting emphasis on utilitarian aspects of mathematics. This is reflected in the reconceptualisation of mathematical competence as mathematical literacy, loosely conceived as those ways of thinking, reasoning and working mathematically that allow us to engage effectively in everyday situations in many occupations and the cut and thrust of world economies as active, empowered and participatory citizens. It is no surprise then that mathematics has become one of the most politically charged subjects in primary school curricula worldwide We are experiencing an unprecedented proliferation of regional and national strategies to establish benchmarks raise standards enhance achievement close gaps and leave no child behind in mathematics education Industries have sprung up around the design administration and monitoring of standardised assessment to measure and compare children s mathematical achievement against identified benchmarks and each other

Gross,2003-12-16 Exceptionally Gifted Children is unique The first edition of this book published in 1993 introduced 15 remarkable children some of the most gifted young people ever studied and traced their path through school exploring their academic achievements and in some cases enforced underachievement their emotional development their social relationships and their family relationships and upbringing This new edition reviews these early years but also follows the young people over the subsequent ten years into adulthood No previous study has traced so closely and so sensitively the intellectual social and emotional development of highly gifted young people This 20 year study reveals the ongoing negative academic and social effects of prolonged underachievement and social isolation imposed on gifted children by inappropriate curriculum and class placement and shows clearly the long lasting benefits of thoughtfully planned individual educational programs The young adults of this study speak out and show how what happened in school has influenced and still influences many aspects of their lives Miraca Gross provides a clear practical blueprint for teachers and parents who recognise the special learning needs of gifted children and seek to respond effectively Resources in Education ,1997 15 PGT Chemistry Test
