Abstract: The authors report on a 10-year longitudinal study of the development of reading and mathematics skills in a sample of 1,000 children. The study found that children who were reading at the 50th percentile at age 5 were at the 25th percentile by age 10, and children who were at the 25th percentile at age 5 were at the 10th percentile by age 10. The study also found that children who were at the 75th percentile at age 5 were at the 50th percentile by age 10, and children who were at the 50th percentile at age 5 were at the 25th percentile by age 10. The study suggests that early intervention is important for children who are at risk for reading and mathematics difficulties.
