

Facing My Greatest Fear

Facing one's fear takes a lot of courage. One of the fear that I've ever had was going to the dentist. I was afraid of the dentist, but I decided that being checked up and have my teeth cleaned was an important hygiene that I should do. I also thought it would be a part of good hygiene and would help me become a better person. What I didn't realize was that facing my fear to see the dentist would also make me a more confident person. Just thinking about going to the dentist office made me feel nervous. I can still remember ten years ago about my past experience with my last check-up with the dentist.

The dentist pulled out a part of my temporary tooth that was pushed to the side by my permanent teeth which was fully grown. I was holding the dentist's chair very tight while he was injecting my gums for numbing and when he was pulling my teeth out. After he was able to pull it out, when I began to stand, my hands and knees were shaking and all I see were black shapes on my way out then I fainted. From then on, my fear of going to the dentist was built up. This continued on for several years. Because of my past experiences, getting ready to face my fear was easy for me.

When I went to my dentist appointment this month, the dental hygienist showed me the different tools he was going to use. As I sat on a cushy seat, my fear was beginning to rise. The dental hygienist gently placed a cover on my chest and positioned the chair to a lying position. I asked him if it's alright for him that I will use my ipod. He said yes. A flat screen T. V. hanged on the ceiling was showing a game show. With the T. V. on the ceiling, and my music on my ears, my pain and fear was diverted to it.

Whenever I hear the buzzing sound of the silvery tool he was using, I set the volume of my music louder so I could not hear the buzzing sound. Facing my fear was not hard as I thought it would be, and in the end my courage paid off. Not only did I face my fear, but I also learned some thing about techniques on how to divert my fear and pain. Now when I go to the dentist, I am not so nervous. I may feel uncomfortable to begin with, but I know that as I go see the dentist on a regular basis, I will feel more and more comfortable. It was a wonderful feeling when I learned and was able to face the greatest fear of my life.

Agents of Integration Rebecca S. Nowacek, 2011-11-02 The question of how students transfer knowledge is an important one as it addresses the larger issue of the educational experience In Agents of Integration Understanding Transfer as a Rhetorical Act Rebecca S. Nowacek explores through a series of case studies the issue of transfer by asking what in an educational setting engages students to become agents of integration individuals actively working to perceive as well as to convey effectively to others the connections they make While many studies of transfer are longitudinal with data collected over several years Nowacek's is synchronous a rich cross-section of the writing and classroom discussions produced by a team taught learning community three professors and eighteen students enrolled in a one-semester general education interdisciplinary humanities seminar that consisted of three linked courses in history literature and religious studies With extensive field notes carefully selected student and teacher self reports in the form of interviews and focus groups and thorough examinations of recorded classroom discussions student papers with professor comments and student notebooks Nowacek presents a nuanced and engaging analysis that outlines how transfer is not simply a cognitive act but a rhetorical one that involves both seeing connections and presenting them to the instructors who are institutionally positioned to recognize and value them Considering the challenges facing instructors teaching for transfer and the transfer of writing related knowledge Nowacek develops and outlines a new theoretical framework and methodological model of transfer and illustrates the practical implications through case studies and other classroom examples She proposes transfer is best understood as an act of recontextualization and she builds on this premise throughout the book by drawing from previous work in cognitive psychology activity theory and rhetorical genre theory as well as her own analyses of student work This focused examination complements existing longitudinal studies and will help readers better understand not only the opportunities and challenges confronting students as they work to become agents of integration but also the challenges facing instructors as they seek to support that student work We Heard the Heavens Then Aria Minu-Sepehr,2013-04-23
