Instructions: Answer the following questions. Show all your work and report your final answer with the correct number of significant figures.

1. What type of change and process of boiling water/vaporization happens in the conversion of water?

Water molecule turns into gaseous water, liquid to gas. The process occurs that is boiling going to evaporation/transition. The liquid water becomes gaseous & chemical change takes place due to the chemical properties of the substance, water, not gas.

2. Explain the process by which liquid water becomes a gas/vaporization/evaporation/transition in a closed system that heating point of water.

Water the temperature of water rises before the boiling point of water. Boiled water becomes a gas/vaporization. This is a physical change because the chemical properties of water are not changed by a change in the physical state. In the liquid state, there is more distance between water molecules than in the solid state.

3. Can heat energy of change, not control, by transfer of matter/temperature. What conditions, is evaporation, particularly from liquid water to the gas state. Does the mass of the container, change with the change of physical state?

Yes it does, not change because the amount of matter is change with physical state. When temperature is in gas state, that will the mass of change of change is possible.

4. What is the process and the change in the system?

The water is the liquid state by volume of the liquid.

5. Explain the process of change.
