Education Policy: 2003 Diane Ravitch, 2010-12-01 In 1983 the seminal report issued by the National Commission on Excellence in Education A Nation at Risk charged that most American high schoolers were following a general course of instruction choosing neither the college preparatory track nor the vocational option This pattern the report complained had fostered low expectations and a curricular hodge podge of classes that failed to prepare students for college or work The commission called on states to implement academic requirements for all students regardless of background including four years of English and three years each of science mathematics and social studies Students should not be sorted by their presumed future destinations the commission reasoned but should be offered an equal opportunity to get a high quality education to fit them either for postsecondary education or the modern workplace Two decades after the commission called on states to reform the high school environment and raise graduation requirements the Brown Center on Education Policy at the Brookings Institution convened a group of prominent scholars to explore the current state of America s high schools focusing on new research about reforming these institutions that are so important in the lives of the nation s adolescents The questions considered reflected the diversity of the participants and covered a variety of areas historical international sociological and practical Data gathered by the U S Department of Education show students today are taking many more advanced courses in mathematics and the sciences while at the same time test scores do not reflect the increases in enrollments in academic courses In addition large score gaps remain among students from different social groups Reform of the high schools must take into account the elementary and middle schools that prepare students and the postsecondary institutions to which students aspire Adolescent culture and students views about school and academic work play important roles in student achievement as do the family and contemporary society in shaping of adolescent behavior No matter their background all participants agreed that the key to a successful high school rests with the extent to which it recognizes and strengthens its commitment to the intellectual growth of its students Antiriot Bill, 1967 United States. Congress.
Senate. Committee on the Judiciary, 1967 The African American Struggle for Secondary Schooling, 1940-1980 John L. Rury, Shirley A. Hill, 2015-04-24 This is the first comprehensive account of African American secondary education in the postwar era Drawing on quantitative datasets as well as oral history this compelling narrative examines how African Americans narrowed the racial gap in high school completion The authors explore regional variations in high school attendance across the United States and how intraracial factors affected attendance within racial groups They also examine the larger social historical context such as the national high school revolution the civil rights movement campaigns to expand schooling and urging youth to stay in school and Black migration northward Closing chapters focus on desegregation and the urban crisis of the 1960s and 1970s that accelerated White flight and funding problems for urban school systems The conclusion summarizes these developments and briefly looks at the period since 1980 when secondary attainment levels stopped advancing for Blacks and Whites alike Book Highlights A comprehensive history drawing on statistical analysis archival research and interviews with African Americans who attended school in the 1940s and 1950s Lessons from the past showing how parents and local communities played the most direct and dynamic role in the fight for access to education Today s major challenges including the growth of inner city poverty and changing family structures John L Rury is professor of education and by courtesy history at the University of Kansas Shirley A Hill is professor of sociology at the University of Kansas Based on prodigious research The African American Struggle for Secondary Schooling sets a new standard of excellence in social history and policy studies The authors evocatively recreate the passions of the civil rights movement and centrality of public schools in the ongoing quest for justice opportunity and freedom William J Reese Carl F Kaestle WARF Professor of Educational Policy Studies and History University of Wisconsin Madison This book is a rich and compelling addition to the literature on secondary education generally and on secondary education for African Americans specifically It will set the standard for historical studies on American high schools for a long time to come Jeffrey Mirel David L Angus Collegiate Chair of Education Professor of History University of Michigan The African American Struggle for Secondary Schooling fills a major gap in the history of African American educational history This book will be on my shelf and will no doubt be on the shelves of scholars and students who study African American educational history Thomas V O'Brien Professor and Chair Department of Educational Studies and Research University of Southern Mississippi This is the only book length account of the growth and impact of secondary education for African Americans post 1930 With a unique and original analysis the authors frame key themes not only within the common historiographical tradition of an unfolding of growth and development over time but correctly understand that high school entailed opportunities for attainment in a broader social sense as well Michael Fultz Professor Department of Educational Policy Studies University of Wisconsin Madison

Hello Professor Vanessa Siddle Walker, 2009-08-16 Like many black school principals Ulysses Byas who served the Gainesville Georgia school system in the 1950s and 1960s was reverently addressed by community members as Professor He kept copious notes and records throughout his career documenting efforts to improve the education of blacks Through conversations with Byas and access to his extensive archives on his principalship Vanessa Siddle Walker finds that black principals were well positioned in the community to serve as conduits of ideas knowledge and tools to support black resistance to officially sanctioned regressive educational systems in the Jim Crow South Walker explains that principals participated in local regional and national associations comprising a black educational network through which power structures were formed and ideas were spread to schools across the South The professor enabled local school empowerment and applied the collective wisdom of the network to pursue common school projects such as pressuring school superintendents for funding structuring professional development for teachers and generating local action that was informed by research in academic practice The professor was uniquely positioned to learn about and deploy resources made available through these networks Walker s record of the transfer of ideology from black organizations into a local setting illuminates the remembered activities of black schools throughout the South and recalls for a new generation the role of the professor in uplifting black communities
